
THE POWER OF ONE.

That's the way the work of Physicians for Peace happens.

One surgeon who travels to Malawi to train dozens of residents and clinical officers in the operating room.

One nurse who enthusiastically shares her experiences with nursing colleagues across the globe.

One patient selected out of 60 on one screening day when our volunteer surgeons arrive in country to teach their colleagues how to perform a life-restoring surgery.

One occupational therapist who volunteers one evening to demonstrate essential burn care positioning via one webcam to dozens of colleagues across four time zones.

One family making one donation every month for the past 12 years.

One fellowship-trained reconstructive urologist, the first-ever, in the Dominican Republic.

Teach ONE. Heal many.

One man was inspired to create Physicians for Peace when he realized that surgeons from countries in conflict formed long-lasting, collegial bonds working together around one operating table.

The vision of this one man has inspired hundreds of volunteers and supporters to save and restore lives in the thousands of people over the past 30 years.

As we conclude another year of teach one. heal many. we invite you to make one gift. Perhaps one of many this year. Perhaps the first one this year.

Your one gift makes our life-saving work possible.

Wishing you a peaceful holiday season, and in gratitude for your friendship,

James E. (Jamie) Morgan
Chief Executive Officer

"YOU ARE MY DOMINICAN REPUBLIC BROTHER!
YOU FIXED MY INJURY. YOU FIXED MY LIFE!"

Orlando was number 13 of 60 patients evaluated in an afternoon by the PFP international medical educator team upon their arrival in Santo Domingo. He was selected for treatment from an injury that severely limited his mobility and prevented him from finishing his college studies.
